Rules and conditions for self-worth

1 | Purpose, fit and boundaries

Purpose of this unit

Identify a demand the person places on themselves to feel worthy, when it grows stronger and its costs. Develop more flexible wording to explore, without making it a new rule that must be followed.

Choice and adaptation

Choose this sheet following professional assessment and with consent. The person may skip questions, answer aloud, or choose another tool. This is proposed original material for review; it provides no score, diagnosis, or promise of an outcome.

Boundaries specific to this unit

Do not prescribe what the person should value or blame family, culture or faith through a predetermined conclusion. Distinguish chosen commitment from generalizations about personal worth. Do not use this sheet for repeated seeking of moral reassurance.

Reusing existing material

SELF-01 separates events from self-worth, and Core-03 explores interpretation patterns. Here we examine conditions linking achievement or another person's reaction to self-worth; do not duplicate a thought diary.

> Draft for administrator review. Clinical review and final rights approval are still pending.

Working together with the worksheet

2 | A conversation about one situation

Opening

Choose a situation the person wants to explore. It need not be the hardest situation. Check that the question is understood and the wording fits the person; their account comes before the therapist's interpretation.

1 | Question for discussion

What situation triggered a demand about my worth as a person?

2 | Question for discussion

What condition am I setting for myself in that situation?

3 | Question for discussion

When is it useful, and when is its cost too high?

4 | Question for discussion

How can I distinguish an important goal from my overall worth?

5 | Question for discussion

What realistic, respectful alternative could we phrase and explore?

Closing

Summarize what became clearer and what remains open. Use the existing SES-S01 and SES-S02 for the session framework. There is no need to repeat an assessment or plan already recorded.

Adapting for four age groups

3 | Age is a starting point, not an assumption about ability

CH | Children, approximately ages 6 to 11

Use a small situation and words the child chooses. Do not ask them to prove they are good or earn love through achievement.

Offer one question at a time with little writing. Adult support must not replace the child's own voice.

TE | Adolescents, approximately ages 12 to 17

Consider social comparison, education and belonging without assuming they cause the difficulty. Names and details can be omitted.

Agree in advance what will be shared and with whom, and explain the privacy limits in this setting. Do not promise absolute confidentiality.

AD | Adults

Explore demands from work, parenting or relationships without dismissing practical responsibility or equating worth with performance.

OA | Older adults

Respect history and values. Explore how current roles fit without requiring the person to abandon a meaningful commitment.

Offer reading support, time, and conversation according to preference. Choose help from another person together with the participant, respecting their privacy.

> Each age version needs its own review. Approval of one version does not automatically approve the others.

Practice, review and next steps

4 | Shared choice and learning from the attempt

Before offering practice sheet P

Decide together whether practice between sessions is appropriate at all. Define one opportunity, boundaries, and desired support. Practice may take place only in the session. There is no required daily sequence or requirement to share the sheet with others.

At the next session

Check whether a distinction emerged between a demand and identity. The aim is to expand choice, not to obtain agreement with a positive sentence.

Professional and technical records

Each version has a separate review record covering age suitability, originality, rights, and fictional filling. Reviewer and date fields remain blank until assigned. File checks or a code merge are not clinical approval. Clinical information stays only in the authorized setting, outside the code repository.

The following links were used for background only. Questions and adaptations were written afresh for the expansion plan; no questionnaire, scale, or protocol was copied. Adult sources do not validate the child versions. This material makes no claim about session count or treatment effectiveness.
