Separating an event from self-worth

1 | Purpose, fit and boundaries

Purpose of this unit

Listen to a critical sentence that follows an event and explore what it describes and what it generalizes about the person. The aim is accurate, respectful wording, without requiring positive thinking or proof of worth through achievement.

Choice and adaptation

Choose this sheet following professional assessment and with consent. The person may skip questions, answer aloud, or choose another tool. This is proposed original material for review; it provides no score, diagnosis, or promise of an outcome.

Boundaries specific to this unit

Do not deny harm, discrimination or actual feedback. Do not ask people to justify their worth, compare themselves with others or repeat a sentence they do not believe. If writing itself is burdensome, stop and work through conversation.

Reusing existing material

CORE-02/04 already support mapping and exploring thoughts. SELF-01 focuses on moving from an event description to a label about oneself; do not create another general thought diary here.

> Draft for administrator review. Clinical review and final rights approval are still pending.

Working together with the worksheet

2 | A conversation about one situation

Opening

Choose a situation the person wants to explore. It need not be the hardest situation. Check that the question is understood and the wording fits the person; their account comes before the therapist's interpretation.

1 | Question for discussion

Which specific event did I choose to explore?

2 | Question for discussion

What overall conclusion did I draw about myself?

3 | Question for discussion

What is a factual description, and what is an overall judgment?

4 | Question for discussion

What context, need or further information matters here?

5 | Question for discussion

What accurate and respectful wording can I offer myself?

Closing

Summarize what became clearer and what remains open. Use the existing SES-S01 and SES-S02 for the session framework. There is no need to repeat an assessment or plan already recorded.

Adapting for four age groups

3 | Age is a starting point, not an assumption about ability

CH | Children, approximately ages 6 to 11

Use a concrete example and words the child chooses. Do not require a list of successes to prove they are good.

Offer one question at a time with little writing. Adult support must not replace the child's own voice.

TE | Adolescents, approximately ages 12 to 17

Explore criticism, belonging and comparisons raised by the adolescent; do not assume every criticism is a distortion.

Agree in advance what will be shared and with whom, and explain the privacy limits in this setting. Do not promise absolute confidentiality.

AD | Adults

Separate feedback about an action from a person's worth, while recognizing responsibility and social context.

OA | Older adults

Changes in roles or ability can be considered if the person chooses, without making age a blanket explanation.

Offer reading support, time, and conversation according to preference. Choose help from another person together with the participant, respecting their privacy.

> Each age version needs its own review. Approval of one version does not automatically approve the others.

Practice, review and next steps

4 | Shared choice and learning from the attempt

Before offering practice sheet P

Decide together whether practice between sessions is appropriate at all. Define one opportunity, boundaries, and desired support. Practice may take place only in the session. There is no required daily sequence or requirement to share the sheet with others.

At the next session

Check whether the new wording felt believable and helpful. If not, return to the description and support needed. The aim is not to erase difficult feelings or replace them with a positive declaration.

Professional and technical records

Each version has a separate review record covering age suitability, originality, rights, and fictional filling. Reviewer and date fields remain blank until assigned. File checks or a code merge are not clinical approval. Clinical information stays only in the authorized setting, outside the code repository.

Background references

The following links were used for background only. Questions and adaptations were written afresh for the expansion plan; no questionnaire, scale, or protocol was copied. Adult sources do not validate the child versions. This material makes no claim about session count or treatment effectiveness.
