Maintaining fair self-treatment

1 | Purpose, fit and boundaries

Purpose of this unit

Summarize helpful ways of treating oneself, identify comparison or criticism contexts, and develop a response and support plan. It remains flexible and does not require feeling good about oneself at all times.

Choice and adaptation

Choose this sheet following professional assessment and with consent. The person may skip questions, answer aloud, or choose another tool. This is proposed original material for review; it provides no score, diagnosis, or promise of an outcome.

Boundaries specific to this unit

Do not turn the plan into a compulsive daily check, a promise of no difficult thoughts or a requirement to manage alone. Fair self-treatment can coexist with pain, mistakes and uncertainty. Significant distress needs appropriate assessment.

Reusing existing material

Core-08 already provides a maintenance framework. Here we gather SELF-01 to SELF-05 tools for criticism, comparison and mistakes; an existing support plan can be referenced.

> Draft for administrator review. Clinical review and final rights approval are still pending.

Working together with the worksheet

2 | A conversation about one situation

Opening

Choose a situation the person wants to explore. It need not be the hardest situation. Check that the question is understood and the wording fits the person; their account comes before the therapist's interpretation.

1 | Question for discussion

What did I learn about rules, labels and responses to myself?

2 | Question for discussion

In what contexts do I tend to return to a painful generalization?

3 | Question for discussion

What realistic, respectful response could I choose then?

4 | Question for discussion

What boundaries or supportive relationships help me?

5 | Question for discussion

What will we agree about reviewing the plan and seeking further help?

Closing

Summarize what became clearer and what remains open. Use the existing SES-S01 and SES-S02 for the session framework. There is no need to repeat an assessment or plan already recorded.

Adapting for four age groups

3 | Age is a starting point, not an assumption about ability

CH | Children, approximately ages 6 to 11

The child is not responsible for arranging help. Prepare a brief reminder with an appropriate adult without requiring constant monitoring.

Offer one question at a time with little writing. Adult support must not replace the child's own voice.

TE | Adolescents, approximately ages 12 to 17

Include the option of stepping away from comparison or asking for help, without requiring blocked relationships or reports of every thought.

Agree in advance what will be shared and with whom, and explain the privacy limits in this setting. Do not promise absolute confidentiality.

AD | Adults

Check that the plan does not become another demand to succeed at self-treatment. Use existing support sources with consent.

OA | Older adults

Conversation and an accessible reminder are options. Do not assume family is the preferred or available support source.

Offer reading support, time, and conversation according to preference. Choose help from another person together with the participant, respecting their privacy.

> Each age version needs its own review. Approval of one version does not automatically approve the others.

Practice, review and next steps

4 | Shared choice and learning from the attempt

Before offering practice sheet P

Decide together whether practice between sessions is appropriate at all. Define one opportunity, boundaries, and desired support. Practice may take place only in the session. There is no required daily sequence or requirement to share the sheet with others.

At the next session

Check simplicity, accessibility and usefulness. Returning difficulties do not erase learning; do not add forms merely to achieve a perfect feeling.

Professional and technical records

Each version has a separate review record covering age suitability, originality, rights, and fictional filling. Reviewer and date fields remain blank until assigned. File checks or a code merge are not clinical approval. Clinical information stays only in the authorized setting, outside the code repository.

Background references

The following links were used for background only. Questions and adaptations were written afresh for the expansion plan; no questionnaire, scale, or protocol was copied. Adult sources do not validate the child versions. This material makes no claim about session count or treatment effectiveness.
